

Faru Faru – Singita

Serengeti

Faru Faru is tucked behind a small, vegetated hill, overlooking a permanent waterhole and the tree-line of the Grumeti River. Outwardly the six stone, canvas and thatched suites have the air of a classic safari camp, yet the interiors are the ultimate in contemporary chic with panoramic glass windows to the front, mirrored room dividers and claw-foot baths-with-view.

With 9 super luxury tented rooms, complete with virtually everything you could ever need (!) this lodge is the most luxurious of any camp in the Serengeti with a styled contemporary feel.

The central areas are carefully constructed out of local stone and are cleverly designed to take advantage of the terraced side of the hill. A river-sand 'beach' has been created for sunbathing, a fabulous swimming pool overlooks a productive waterhole and elevated viewing decks make perfect spots for surveying the rugged landscape beyond. The small size of the camp give it a truly intimate feel and allow for some excellent activities: dry season walks along the Grumeti River are a particular highlight of visits to Faru Faru. Throughout the migration months of June, July and August the camp can literally teem with game and in the dry season, after the great herds have departed for greener pastures in the north, the Grumeti draws in large concentrations of resident wildlife and so provides good viewing year round.

Our View

One of the most luxurious camps in the whole of Tanzania! The reserve is private meaning it is rare to see another vehicle whilst on safari making the whole Serengeti experience exclusive and authentic.

Absolutely superb in the migration months and perfect out of these for a truly luxurious safari, Faru Faru, as with all Singita camps, is actually a destination itself. It is a tough choice between here and Sabora.

Faru is certainly more luxurious, where as Sabora has the plains and a unique feel in camp - as with Sabora, this is one of the finest camps in Tanzania, but we are staying on the fence as to which is better!
